

An aerial photograph of a mountain range. A prominent feature is a large, dark, roughly circular crater or depression on the left side of the mountain. A long, narrow, light-colored ridge or path runs diagonally across the upper right portion of the mountain. The terrain is rugged and appears to be covered in snow or light-colored rock. The surrounding area is dark, likely representing the sea level or a deep valley.

The shape of a mountain top blown to pieces